TOWN TALK.

The civil jury cases will be on call in the superior court today.

Chicken thieves are busy these days and are reaping quite a harvest.

James Bayne and his dancing pupils give a hop at Luce's Hall to-morrow night.

The hotel registers show the presence of a good many furniture buyers in the city.

The turkey races are getting to be very popular at the Division street roller rink.

The Western Michigan Medical Company have increased their capital stock from $25,000 to $50,000.

Mr. L. M. Weston purchased on Saturday, at mortgage sale, the Haldane block, on Canal street, for $14,000.

The brick work on John McIntyre's new house on Ionia street is completed and work on the roof has commenced.

The Fortnightly Club of the Universalist Church Society, meet on Friday evening, at the residence of O. E. Brown.

The annual election of officers of the Grand Rapids Guard, will be held at the Armory this evening at 8 o'clock sharp.

A man named Swanholm, porter in Harper's saloon, received a legacy of $10,000 from his parents who died in Sweden recently.

The Kent County Sportsman's Club held their annual meeting Wednesday evening at the office of Dr. Holmes, on Ottawa street.

Tickets for the charity ball which will be held at the Morton House to-morrow evening can be secured at Eaton, Lyon & Allen's store.

Geo. R. Healey, a printer, has applied to the Superior Court for a divorce from his wife, Ida G. Healey. He charges cruelty and desertion.

The members of the Unitarian church will hold a social meeting in the Ladies' Literary Club room on Pearl street Wednesday evening.

The boot and shoe dealers on Monroe and Canal streets will close their stores at 7 o'clock every evening except Saturdays until the first of March.

The proceedings of the Common Council will doubtless prove interesting to several saloon-keepers to-night, as the abrogation of one or two licenses is expected.

J. K. Johnston, of the Eagle Hotel, will extend the hospitalities of his house to the congregation of the First Baptist church for a social to be held next Thursday evening.

Mr. L. W. Wood, proprietor of the Globe Mills, will re-build the interior of the mills. He will take all of the present machinery out and replace it with a full line of rollers.

The annual meeting of the Michigan Funeral Directors Association will be held at East Saginaw, on Wednesday. Mr. Allen Duffee, of this city, will read a paper on embalming.

Burglars got into Clark's Bottling Works on South Division street, Saturday night, by forcing open the rear doors. A man sleeping in the building heard them and frightened them away.

Some one forced open the door of H. F. Hasten's barn on Jefferson avenue, Saturday evening, and set it on fire. Fortunately it was discovered and put out before any damage was done.

A boy named Riley, aged 13 years, was arrested for larceny on Saturday night. He broke into the G. R. & L. station house at Carleton, six miles south of this city, and stole $6.90 from the till.

The Royal Templars will give a public entertainment at their hall, 62 Monroe street, this evening. Music and speaking will be the order of exercises. The public are cordially invited. No admission fee is asked.

The West Side Rink is becoming entirely inadequate to accommodate the throng, who go there nightly. It is well managed, however, and is patronized by the best people in the city. An addition will probably be built if ground can be secured.

Foundmaster Cramrine will, in conjunction with the Board of Health, inspect every basement, out-house, backyard, cellar, sewer and alley and where they are found in an unwholesome condition the owner or occupant will receive a notice to clean up.

Sligh, Madden and Jennings waived further examination before Justice Westfall Saturday, and were held for trial in the Circuit Court. Bail was fixed at $2,500 for Sligh, and $2,000 for Madden and Jennings, and being unable to secure it, they were sent to jail.

The Rev. Charles Fluhrer, upon the conclusion of his present course of lectures on Shakespeare's Seven Ages, will commence a series upon "Religious Efforts and their Leaders." In these lectures he will investigate the Catholic, Methodist, Calvin and other systems of religion, closing with a review of the modern Liberal Church.

H. A. Lee, advance of the "Bunch of Keys" company, is in the city seeing to the necessary preparations for the production of the play here at Powers's on the 24th inst.

The River Rising.

The river has again assumed a position to call for comment. The ice has again formed a blockade. Last night the water was rising at Leonard street bridge at the rate of two inches an hour. As a two days' storm is predicted by the signal service, there are yet chances for much damage from the water, and the occupants of the basements may be forced to "migrate" again. With the ice wedged together as it is, those who have watched the stream for years anticipate much trouble if the ice doesn't move out.

Again Arrested.

F. W. Morris was arrested on Saturday by Detective Gast on a warrant issued at the instance of the Humane Society charging him with cruelty to animals. Judge Holmes will probably consider the case this morning. Morris was released on bail.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

BY A PERIPATETIC GENTLEMAN.

Dull Business at the Theaters—The American Game at Home—Fanciful Critics Criticized, Etc.

The Peripatetic is pleased to note that the Board of Health is arranging for a thorough inspection of the sewers, alleys and all places where filth is liable to accumulate, with a view of having them cleaned, and put in such condition as will prevent their being the medium of promoting diseases. Cholera is expected to arrive in the country, in the summer, and unless Grand Rapids is guarded and careful about its sanitary condition it will be included in the tour of the dreaded scourge.

This is what is termed an open winter and people are all praying for a change. Those who have purchased sleighs and sealskin saques are writhing with disappointment, while he whose overcoat is ticketed smiles with contentment that Providence has so favored his misfortune. At any rate the present temperature and general aspect of the elements carries many disadvantages with reference both to health and to business. It is a subject so extensively discussed that it is an infringement upon the rights of the novice in society, whose first task is to endeavor to frame nicely worded sentences about the weather. An introduction that is not followed by a discussion on this subject is rare, indeed; and this hackneyed topic has been and is the stepping stone to romances, declarations of love, marriage and divorce. A first-class blizzard, with a heavy snow storm, would prove most acceptable to the farmer and the community in general.

Manager Powers intimates that if business at the theatre doesn't take a turn for the better, it will be necessary for him to release some of the members of his orchestra in order to reduce expenses. It is to be hoped that this move will not become necessary, for a better organization is seldom found in cities of the size of Grand Rapids. All companies that come here have a word of praise for the orchestra, and many have stated that there are many orchestras in the theaters in the larger cities that are greatly inferior to it. To reduce the membership would greatly weaken its efficiency and ability to play the class of music now in the repertoire. It has been appreciated by the audiences and to many has proved a charm, and has taken the curse off of many a bad play. The Peripatetic hopes that business will improve so as to insure the maintenance of the present organization complete.

A lady remarked to a gentleman last week: "Oh, why don't they have something nice at the theatre so I can go?" Now, what theatre did she mean? Powers's and Redmond's have not given anything that could be considered naughty or the opposite of nice. The lady probably belonged to that full-dress element—and they have been conspicuously absent at the theatres so far this season—who are attracted to see how each other looks in their full society regiments, rather than to take an intelligent look at what is passing on the stage. Fortunately, this is not the element that is critical or capable of discerning dramatic merit any further than having an admiration for the dresses that may be worn in society drama, still there is a clique in Grand Rapids who consider it utterly improper to attend the theatre unless the elite, or those who have assumed to seclude themselves by a fictitious blue-blood lineage, are going to be there. The opera houses are not entirely supported by the people who can afford the luxury. If the management was at the mercy of the wealthier classes for support, Grand Rapids would have long ago been christened, like Detroit, the theatrical grave-yard.

There has been some talk lately in reference to extending the city limits. The city has grown out of its present charter boundaries. Beyond the eastern limits there is a population extending into the thousands, all of whom are connected with the industries and affairs of the city. This is also noticeable beyond the northern and southern limits. There are some manufacturing institutions outside of the boundaries, and it has been intimated that they have located there so they would not have to pay city taxes. The limits should be extended a half a mile in the directions named. There are more good reasons in favor of such an extension than against it. The aldermen should include this in their charter amendments and if they investigate the source of the opposition made to the change they will find it to come from large property owners and manufacturing industries who have selected their location in order to evade paying the same rate of tax that the people in the city do.

Having had an opportunity to get into the parlors of some of Grand Rapids' respectable families it was observed by way of having an exciting evening's amusement, "jack pots" and four aces were in some instances taking the place of whist and progressive euchre. Of course ignoring the evil touching gambling this can be overlooked and when confined to the home circle passed by without serious comment. But, like drinking, gambling grows with practice, and if a strong will is not brought to bear some will find that their innocent penny ante has led them into dollar ante, and so on to the extent of their pocket money. But then this objection is not serious if the game is confined to the members of the family.

Janaushek.

Janaushek will appear at Powers's next Wednesday evening in "My Life," when the play was produced in Columbus, the Times of that city had the following:

Generally, when a "star" is on the boards, all minor characters, it is immaterial how important they are to the full success of the piece, are treated as insignificant, and to a lot of "sticks" is confined their presentation. Everything is sacrificed that the "star" alone may fill the public eye. It is not so with the Janaushek Company. There is not a stick in it. All the support are capable and meritorious, and the result is we have a perfect piece of acting in the presentation of the play. "My Life" is a piece full of intense interest.

THE SEVEN AGES OF MAN.

Rev. Mr. Fluhrer's Lecture on the Justice, or Law and Life.

In fair round belly with good capon lined, With eyes severe, and beard of formal cut, Full of wise saws and modern instances.

The Rev. Charles Fluhrer began his fourth lecture last evening on Shakespeare's Seven Ages of Man by reading the address to the Conspirators from, "Henry V." and Portia's address to Shylock in the "Merchant of Venice." Referring to the controversy about the authorship of the works of Shakespeare, in which it was contended by many that none but the master-mind of Lord Bacon could have written them, the speaker said that aside from the internal evidence in favor of Shakespeare, was the fact that he was not only a genius, but an universal genius, and one whose mind was not only full, but running over. With this genius, not taught, he divined the secrets of all men and of every nation. In his capacious, many-sided mind, were seats for all men. From the freedom and knowledge with which he wrote, he might have been a soldier, sailor, courtier, and physician, while, added to this, his thorough familiarity with law, which teems on almost every page, justifies the belief that he was a lawyer. Quotations from "Hamlet," "Merchant of Venice" and "Measure for Measure," beautifully illustrated the latter point.

The English character of the justice could not be omitted, and further in the lecture, the bewigged modern English justice in pompous vestments was made to fill an illustration of the subject, and a contrast with the American judicial dress. In the Seven Ages is given the most vivid picture of the English justice; a perfect picture of the physical man, one feeling his importance, if not his responsibility. We look to him to talk wisely, to be full of wise saws, and with a well lined stomach with angles sufficient to lodge all legal controversies. The speaker was inclined to denigrate the want of suitable dress to lend dignity to the American bench, and the fact that with us such vestments in civil life were the peculiar property only of railroad officials and occasionally a policeman. In England, to this day, justices don't forget their dignity, nor allow others to forget it.

The judges, who is guided by reason, justice and precedent, is the grandest outcome of modern civilization. In view of his sacred office, mankind has always paid him the humblest homage and divided with him the honors of the warrior. Moses, as a law-giver formulated the code and character of the Hebrew nation as Lycurgus did that for the Greek; Solon's laws made Athens a republic; the code of Justinian is the legacy of ancient Rome to modern civilization upon whose fundamental principles are based English and American law and the code of Napoleon.

Shakespeare's type of a justice is that of a conservator of society, to the appreciation of which, we rise only in mature life. The boy, exuberant with sport, is governed by the law of his likes and dislikes, and loves no denial until later reason brings him to a recognition of a governing law; the lover is controlled by the law of his fancy or sentiment in which he usually displays about as much judgment as a child. Justice though represented as blind, is blind only to prejudice, while the lover is blind to everything but prejudice. The soldier believes in the law of force, in daring, strength, and not having patience to untie, cuts the Gordian Knot.

The lecturer led his hearers through a maze of apt illustrations upon the eternal principles of law, based upon justice, governing everything in the universe. No contest in life is ever finally settled except upon the basis of justice and right. The moral force of truth and right are more powerful than an army with banners, and though falsehood be sunken deeper than the ocean, or piled mountains high, justice finally will reign supreme. As years pass us toward mature life the loss of animal spirits and the sanguine ardor that pins our faith to a star and the love of chance, have a tendency to poison the mind to an appreciation of justice. We are then more cautious and less venturesome in our acts, more cautious in expressing our opinions, see exceptions where none existed in youth and are slower to learn.

Men dare not ignore the laws of nature. She keeps an exact account, and for every over-indulgence of our inclinations, we pay the forfeit, and find that when we thought we cheated her she only slept. Had Napoleon slept eight hours instead of four, his misfortunes might have been avoided, and his weary, wasting exile never occurred.

Mr. Fluhrer's lecture was so closely woven from premises to logical conclusion, with connecting links of illustration, quotations and present applications to modern society, that but an indifferent idea of its merits can be given in a short synopsis. He drew to a close with a severe criticism upon the system of American jurisprudence, which so frequently failed in the administration of justice, a fault which he laid directly to the door of the people, rather than to the legal profession. He denominated the latter profession as one of the noblest under the sun, to which society owes the shaping of its laws, and as the true police of society to stand guard over the innocent and unprotected; the honest attorney as an apostle of the Most High, and the pettifogger, as an unclean bird that permits liberty to pick justice by the nose. The panacea for a failure of justice, the speaker said, could be found in an awakened pulpit, press and common school system.

To Lecture on Honduras.

J. D. Lacey, Esq., will deliver a lecture on Honduras before the Farmers' Club at their meeting to-morrow afternoon. The substance of the talk is gathered entirely from personal experience and observation, and will be especially interesting inasmuch as it promises to contain a reliable and trustworthy description of the country, its wealth and opportunities which have attracted capitalists from this city.

The report that E. S. Pierce met with serious loss during the high water, and that the clothing he is now selling at such low prices was damaged in the flood is entirely incorrect. All of his stock was beyond the reach of the water, but not beyond the "tidal wave" cut in prices now prevailing at the great wardrobe under the tower clock.

The finest assortment of Cutters in the city at A. R. Antisdell's.

Professional.

Dr. H. W. Catlin has moved his office to 110 Monroe street, with Dr. P. Schurtz. Telephone 222.

Sixteen Years

of experience has convinced me that when a person is troubled with a cough or cold that he must not use a remedy that by the use makes him costive. Steketee's Cough Cure is the only remedy that provides against this; it acts as a physic; it does not gripe; it is the largest bottle for the price. Ask your druggist for Steketee's Cough Cure.

Hops at Luce's Hall.

Another of the pleasant dances given by Mr. James Bayne will take place to-morrow evening at Luce's Hall. All friends and former pupils are invited to be present. No formal invitations are issued.

School Teachers' and Scholars' Attention.

We have just received another large invoice of the U. S. Mail writing paper packets, all sizes, 10 cents.

Perforated Scratch Books, ruled and plain, 5 and 10 cents.

Composition books, all styles, sizes and prices.

An extra inducement offered teachers' buying in quantities.

F. B. WINEGAR, Porter Block.

Millinery Goods.

Mrs. C. A. Phelps has removed from 65 Monroe street to 117 Canal street, Redmond block, where she will be pleased to receive her former customers. The new location gives more room and greater facilities for doing business.

Buy your Cutters of A. R. Antisdell.

Don't Have To.

After using Steketee's Cough Cure you don't have to use pills as a physic, for I have provided against costiveness in this remedy. Nothing can excel my Cough Cure. It is the best and cheapest remedy upon the market for the cure of coughs or colds. Try it. Ask for Steketee's Cough Cure. For sale by druggists and the proprietor.

Geo. G. STEKETEE, 89 Monroe street.

For a Cutter, buy of A. R. Antisdell.

Spring &amp; Company's Card.

The great sale of Dry Goods damaged by water in our basement during the late flood commences this Monday morning. Many of the goods are slightly damaged, but they must all be closed out immediately, and in order to do this we have made such prices as will insure a very rapid sale. Our customers will please have the kindness to be as patient as possible during the great rush.

Among the masses of goods offered will be found a very large amount of merchandise not only useful but seasonable, such as blankets, comfortables, sheetings, crapes, towellings, flannels, cloths, cloakings, table linens, napkins, towels, cambrics, etc. Also about one hundred pieces of white goods suitable for summer dresses, and while this sale is taking place on the East side of our store we have concluded to offer about twenty thousand dollars worth of silks and other dress fabrics on the West side of our establishment at a great sacrifice.

Everybody who may not be in immediate want of such goods as we shall offer will do well to avail themselves of this, the most wonderful sale of Dry Goods that has ever taken place in this city.

Yours respectfully,
SPRING & COMPANY.
